This house is located on the east bank of the Antietam Creek at the village of Security or Fiddlersburg, about two miles east of Hagerstown in Washington County, Maryland. The structure is a one-and-a-half story, three-bay brick dwelling situated on sloping ground east of the creek. The walls are set on high foundations or coursed rubble fieldstone. It faces west. Openings appear to have been spaced evenly in the front elevation. Windows are rather large in size and display narrow framing. They are without decorative trim. Doors are simple in appearance and are framed similarly to the windows. One window in the east walls has wide wooden framing joined with pegs. Common bonding was employed at all elevations. Several courses of corbeling complete the cornice. A brick chimney is located inside the north gable end. The roof is covered with sheet metal and terminates with a barge set directly against the end walls. The house is in fair condition and is located on a tract containing .75 acre.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The area of significance of this house is its architecture. According to local historians, it is one of several houses constructed as company-owned dwellings by the paper mill which operated at Security from about 1865 to 1929.

The village of Fiddlersburg is said to have been named for a number of older men who lived in the community during the late 19th century and who played their fiddles on summer evenings.

Several dated examples of Washington County's 18th century stone dwellings were located in Security.
